

Michelle
F. Altieri,
Esq.

Altieri's career has spanned nearly two decades, representing clients in divorce and family law matters. A partner at Charny, Karpousis, Altieri & Donoian, she's equally committed to volunteering and helping those less fortunate and over the years she has taken up numerous pro bono cases, which earned her the honor of the Edwin P. Rome Pro Bono Achievement Award in 2007. She participates in walks for the Alzheimer's

Association and, along with her firm partners, supports the Ronald McDonald House Southern New Jersey and BookSmiles, among others. Her newest community service endeavor is in the form of a committee person for the Bensalem Democratic party. Altieri, a native of Gloucester County, is a wife and mother of two young children, and says she believes strongly in a work-life balance, which she lives in her everyday schedule.

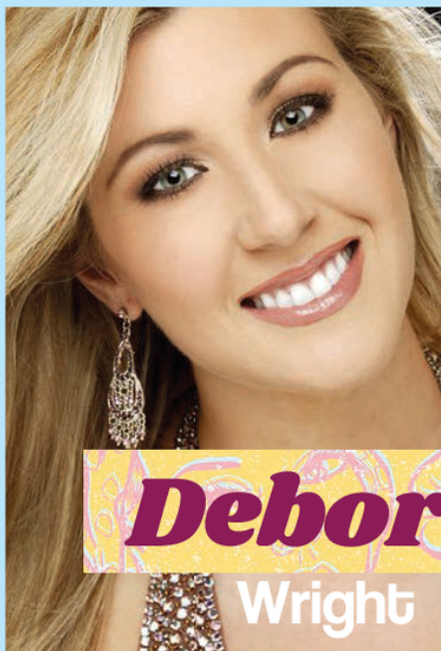

Carrie

Kitchen-Santiago

For more than 20 years,

Kitchen-Santiago has worked to address the causes and effects of poverty through her positions at various non-profits in Philadelphia and South Jersey. She credits her parents with instilling the value of community service from a young age. Kitchen-Santiago has served as executive director of Cathedral Kitchen, the largest meal provider in Camden, for nearly one year. The organization provides food to 120,000 adults and families annually, as well as low-cost and free dental care, and trains low-income adults in the culinary field. Kitchen-Santiago is proud to report that 100 percent of the recent graduating class passed their food safety certification and obtained employment. Since becoming executive director, she has implemented an earlier start time for dinner service, allowing guests to have more time in a climate-controlled, safe space, and she has invited other organizations such as Volunteers of America and First Step Staffing to offer their services during meals.

Deborah
Wright

As the reigning Mrs. New Jersey U.S. Continental,

Wright is no stranger to competing, having been on the pageant circuit since she was 16. Although she has held many titles—including that of Mrs. Galaxy in 2009—giving back to the community is one of her most sincere passions. She's made more than 500 appearances with such organizations as Veterans Affairs, Starlight Children's Foundation, The Salvation Army and countless more, but she devotes much of her attention to the Alex's Lemonade Stand Foundation. Wright has made it a personal mission to change the lives of children with cancer through research funding, family support and raising awareness. Her love for children extends to her part-time work in food service at the public schools in Washington Township, where she lives with her husband and daughter. Wright hopes to make a positive impact on the students and to show what a good role model looks like in today's world.
